I Also Have A Camera

aneth over Mainstream Love for all things Drug

Now a days when you turn the car radio on you get bumbarded with songs about getting messed up on a cocktail of random drugs and living life with expensive Liveries. You think to yourself, "there is no way they actually do this stuff right" but then you look at the news and notice these artists are dropping like files. an alarming amount of famous people are either dying or getting hospitalized from overdosing on percention drugs. This has become the new normal, cripping drug dependancies are now a status symbol for the rich and famous. unfortunantly its also easy to have a nasty drug habit when your not rich or famous.

CU

whats worse is that production of thesse prescription medicines have been greatly increased in the last couple of years and its all legal. The xanax, codeline, Ketamine, uppers, and downers are all coming from big pharma, with the mass production of thesse designer drugs, its way too easy for a few crates to "get lost in transit" and end up on the black market and in the hands of the operje all around the world. This also creates the risk of immatation and knock off pills made by street dealers that are cut with even more potent yet cheaper street drugs to maximize the dealers profits at the risk of killing their customers

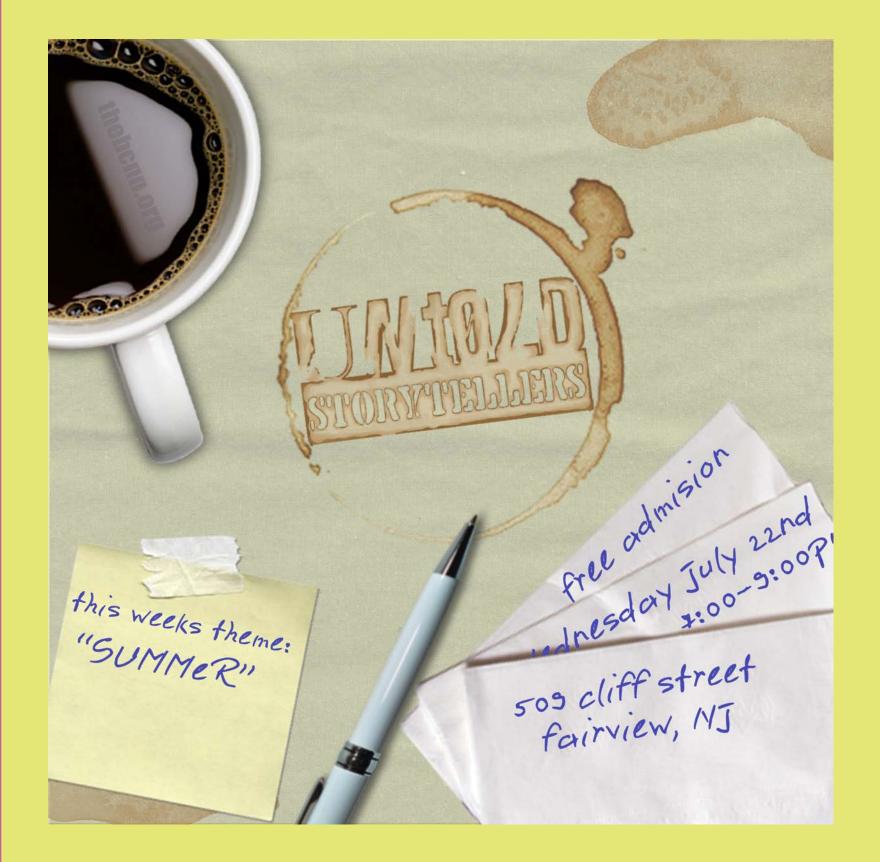

Is may mee perform the provide the second second

You would think after Lil Wayne was hospitalized over his syrup addiction for like the 20th time in under 5 months people in the rap comunity would oh, i don know STOP DINKING THIS STUFF LIKE ITS PEPSI? Its is so bizare how this became the new normal. why is it considered cool to constinually put your body through the stresses of being under the influence of thease things. This is a dangerouse issue that needs to be addressed and fixed as tast as possible. Until then, more andmore people will die at the hands of prescription' black market medicine addictions.
