There were the two showing activities and now we are trying to make a clear concept about this so let's start the learning process, and make great learning about this.

So now at this place, we are making a difference to learn the pros and cons .so let's do learning for making great things about that and also understand what is about that. I hope you can understand by reading this.let's learn individually.

Pros of FBA:

Amazon's FBA program has a lot of positive points and now, we are showing this, for sure. It's not all roses; there are a few negative aspects, But let's cover the good stuff first.

No hassle for shipping and returns

When you get an order from amazon, packing it and sending it out is much work. You have to print a packing slip, print a shipping label, fold up a box, pack your item properly, tape up the box, stick on the shipping label, and leave it for the shipping guys to pick it up.

Of course, it may be an employee doing this work for you – but it's still quite a bit of work. Now if you got 10, 20, 30, or even more orders per day, a good chunk of your time would just be lost in shipping!

Enter Amazon FBA. You send your stuff to Amazon, and they do everything else for you. You just have to watch the sales and come in and your most valuable numbers rise.

That was just shipping. Now for returns! You have to communicate with your buyer, send them an RMA, receive the item, inspect it for faults, send a replacement or a refund, and resell your item.

The logistics aren't too difficult, but the communication can get quite tricky and tedious, especially if you are dealing with a few returns per day.

Amazon FBA puts your products into Amazon's ridiculously simple returns process. You don't even have to deal with the customer – all of that is done through Amazon, and they handle all of the logistics, too.

Cheap shipping

The next big advantage of Amazon is very cheap shipping and packing it costs. You can find the details here. If your product sells through Amazon itself, you're looking at $1.04 per unit in packing costs, and between $0.50 to $0.60 per pound of weight in handling costs – shipping is free. So if you sell items that weigh 3 pounds on average, you'd need to pay about $2.50 per order for shipping it from your home address.

If your item sells through any other channel and Amazon is fulfilling it for you, then your standard(media) sized parcel ships for $1.90 for standard shipping, $0.60 for packing, and $0.45 per pound of weight in handling. So for the same 3-pound product, you're looking at $3.80 per order for shipping, which is still very cheap compared to what you'd have to pay if you are doing this in house.

Automatic Prime

When you fulfill with Amazon FBA, your items automatically qualify for Amazon Prime shipping, so all Prime members can get free two-day shipping for your products.

Amazon Prime is a huge sales motivator – the prospect of getting your products delivered in just two days, and for FREE, is awesome. Most of the time, if an item is available from two sellers, one via Prime and the other via regular shipping, the Prime seller will get the sale.

What's more, you don't have to pay anything more as a Prime seller – you'll be charged the same rate, regardless of whether or not your customer ordered via Prime or regular shipping.

Just the benefit of Prime makes FBA one of the most lucrative online business opportunities around right now.

Buy box priority

Along with Prime, you may have noticed two things: sellers using FBA are higher up in the buy box, and they also have a little emblem saying “Fulfilled By Amazon.” In listings where 20 or more people are selling the same product, every inch you can move higher in the buy box could mean hundreds of orders.

Multi-channel fulfillment

Finally, when you use FBA, you’re not limited to just selling on Amazon’s marketplace. You can sell your products through any channel you wish to sell on, and fulfill your multi-channel orders with FBA. There are even solutions and that will automatically and it sends your orders to FBA for you.

Amazon sees FBA as a win-win situation. Not only are they getting paid to store your stuff, but they also grow the selection of items in their catalog every single day – when sold through the Amazon marketplaces, these are all more things for Amazon to make their 15% cut on.

Now that’s all about the amazon pros site. Now let’s do the learning process for making another think in amazon cons so that we can make a great knowledge about this site .so don’t waste any time let’s start the learning process.

Cons of FBA:

Despite all of these overwhelming pros, there are a few cons to the FBA program that you need to consider.

Stale inventory/losing track

Like any other warehouse operation, if you have hundreds, if not thousands of products in Amazon FBA, It’s highly likely that not all of them will sell. You’ll probably end up with quite a bit of stale inventory that you are paying rent for and not selling.

The other issue is that it's difficult to keep track of FBA inventory once it becomes too much. A hundred to a couple of hundred products are easy to keep track of, and they'll fit on one page of your Seller Central dashboard.

Once those products reach the thousands, though, It will be hard to be abreast of what inventory you have, what you need, and what you should cut back on. Sure, you'll be able to track your best sellers, but aside from that, it'll be difficult – especially since the whole process is so automated.

Pooled inventory

Due to the sheer quantity of products, and sellers, in Amazon's warehouses, not every merchant gets their bin location for every product. Quite often on your inventory will pool with the same products, from other sellers.

This is generally not that big of a deal, but what it means is that the physical product your customer receives may not be the exact one you sent to Amazon. It may be one and it from another seller.

There is a chance and another seller will be selling the same item but for lesser quality, or potentially even counterfeit.

There are stories out there of sellers having their account suspended due to defective, or counterfeit merchandise that was supplied by another seller. It's not common and we think but it can happen.

Difficulty in shipping product to Amazon

The final con factor of Amazon FBA is the difficulty of getting things over to Amazon's warehouses. Amazon has a very strict ASIN/UPC system, and you have to label every one of your products individually, pack them up into multiple shipments(that go to Amazon's multiple warehouses), and send them off.

So one shipment to FBA will be 3 or 4 shipments, which will also add to your bottom line costs.

Amazon does offer a service where they will label the products for you at $0.20 per product, So that may be worth considering as you are starting.

That was the two-item of Amazon and that's pros and cons. We are trying to discuss briefly and by maintaining all kinds of situations. I hope by reading this topic you clear you're any kind of concept about that. And it will be a very good concept ever things to you by using the job on Amazon FBA. so that can make you a great suggestion to you for now. How to choose the best niches:

Simply put, niche implies a smaller part of a broad market that focuses specifically on particular demographic, common interests, location, or problem among the consumers. Think of it to be a sub-market. For example, if we consider the automobile segment as a market, then a niche, in this case, would be the radial tires market or the pistons market.

Similarly, if we look at the electronics, then a niche there would be portable mobile chargers or wireless earphones and so on.

The idea here is to cater to a small segment of the population as it is easy and more profitable.

For your Amazon business (or any business for that matter), it is important that you look for a niche product. The competition you face here will not be as much as what you will face when you enter a broader market. Furthermore, from a customer acquisition point of view, you will need to focus on acquiring only a few people, let's say 1,000, in comparison to acquiring 100,000 customers or even more.

That's why Amazon sellers love niche products. It makes a good job of landing on sales easier and convenient. With only a small segment of customers to look after, you can very easily direct your efforts in the right direction.

So let's start and learn about 9 tips to choose the best niches on amazon and i hope it will be the most important things in it, so let's start it for making a great things in it, let's start this item . and i hope this will help you for making a great things on amazon fba business. so, let's start
So, for the first time, i want to suggest you to making it on the very larger side and i hope this will help you to make perfect things in it, and also have perfect knowledge about it. so let's start this at this time and also want to increase this in it . just start the knowledge for making great learner things and hope that it will help you for making great things on amazon .let's start.

Now here are the 9 tips for choosing the best niches on Amazon.

A niche product does not suffer from seasonality:

It is not a necessity, but it is a real plus. It is an ideal condition to find an object which will ensure you have a steady sales volume throughout the year.

Take the case of Bluetooth headphones. The demand for this product is likely to be virtually constant throughout the year (with a peak in December due to Christmas). Conversely, if we take the example of air conditioners, it is likely that it won't make many sales in winter. Ideally, you want to avoid these kinds of products that don't sell much at certain times of the year.

The ideal product will guarantee you and a short stable turnover, which always allows you to anticipate stock changes. The only seasonality that is very acceptable is the peak sales and that was during the holiday season! You can use Amazon Keyword Planner or Google Keyword Planner to understand the potential seasonality of a product. If the search volume for a particular product is steady throughout the year with little fluctuations, then it's a good bet!

The product has a good profit on margin!:

The whole point of doing business on Amazon is to make money at the end of the day. Therefore, it is imperative that you research the margins you stand to make on your product before you place an order for the inventory. You will have to account for shipping, advertising, Amazon fees, and other similar charges in the process.

You can use an FBA calculator for this purpose or get in touch with your potential suppliers/manufacturers and get a quotation from them. From our experience, anything above as 25% is a good margin to work.

In addition to the margin, you also have to consider the price points. For instance, if you buy a pen at $0.10 and sell it for $1.50, your margin is excellent. But then, you will have to sell a lot of pens to make good money. On the other hand, if you procure a product for $15 and sell it for $30, it gives you more room to accommodate other charges.

There are no videos of the competing products for your main keyword:

If you want to create a YouTube channel to demonstrate and market your product, you will stand to benefit greatly if you don't have any competitors doing the same. You will have the potential to rank higher when people type this keyword on YouTube or even Google. You can even put a link to your product in the description and drive more traffic to your listings.

It is all about gaining that untethered edge over your rivals, and if this method helps you achieve it, you should go for it.

Consider the Dimensions of the Product:

From a logistical point of view, selling a product that is heavy and large is a nightmare, unless you already have a good delivery network in place. You will end up paying a huge amount for shipping alone – whether it is for sourcing the product from China or just delivering the item to your customers. Plus, with large products, you may also run into many problems and your margins may be impacted.

On the other hand and the products that are small and lightweight are the best to sell! They won't cost a lot to ship and logistically speaking, they are easy to work with. It also makes it a perfect fit for dropshipping.

So before you choose a product and it can be sure to consider its size and weight (Calculate your product's and the weight with this Amazon FBA Weight Calculator) and ensure that it is a very good fit for your business like a model.

Look into the Competition:

Going back to our previous example of Nike shoes and electronic cigarettes, if you choose to sell such products, it is quite likely that you will run into a lot of competition. It will be difficult for you to get your product off the ground, let alone bring it to page one of Amazon search results.

A simple search on Amazon will tell you the kind of competition you can expect for your product. If you find a lot of relevant results, then you may want to reconsider your choices. There is no point in entering a saturated market unless you have a product that can completely turn the game around. Remember you will always find some competition as far as possible, look for low competition niches on the Amazon.

The Sponsored Products slots are full for all your main keywords:

Perform a search on Google or Amazon are using one of the keywords and related to the Amazon niche product that and you have to identify. If sponsored items are present, it's a pretty good sign. Why? Because this shows that there is some demand for this type of product in the market. It means that sellers are earning money with advertising and PPC clicks. It implies that there is some money for you to win in this market.

The product has good demand:

Find good demand product

This one is pretty obvious, but you'd be surprised to know how many sellers actually forget to consider this critical point. For any product that you choose to sell on Amazon, make sure that you will get regular orders; otherwise, it is an exercise in futility. Ideally speaking, what you need is a product like this:

As you can see, the item is receiving more than 100 orders every day. The daily sales potential is massive here and that's the kind of number you should strive to hit in your business. Keep in mind that your products should bring you a loyal consumer base that you can rely on. There must be steady demand throughout the year so that you at least stand to make sales consistently.

Explore Niche communities for the Amazon Product Ideas:

There are plenty of online forums and communities where you can get interesting niche market ideas for your Amazon business. Of course, the journey begins with Reddit – one of the most popular online communities. They have plenty of threads and discussion groups, also known as subreddits, on pretty much every topic you can imagine.

What you can do is explore these communities and see if there is anything that strikes you as a potential business idea. To begin with, you can discuss on lifestyle, traveling, pets and animals, or anything that you find interesting. As you dig deeper, make a list of all the interesting niche ideas that you are coming across.

For instance, in the travel community, you may see people discuss losing their valuables while traveling or facing difficulties with language barriers. Following our previous example of traveling, some people may be into solo traveling; others may like to travel only to beaches, while some may like to volunteer their time while traveling. FAQS on FBA:

For this reason we are just showing and mentioning some kinds of question and reaction to make an answer of it so that you can understand about Amazon FBA and what is the main point of it so let's start the knowledge about and makes a great start about.

- How can we calculate break point and even point on amazon?

Most people are afraid of losing money with Amazon FBA and for good reason. Costs are high, and it is crucial that you can balance costs with sales to make a profit.

Break-Even Point in the Units = Fixed Costs ÷ Sales Price Per Unit and the last things—
Variable Costs

You need to calculate total business costs for the following:

Fixed Costs: Costs that are independent of sales volume (Lease, salaries, warehousing, software, property tax, Amazon fees, etc.). In this case, we will calculate $40,000 per year for our example.

Price Per Unit: How much one product costs. Let's use $19.99 for our example.

Variable costs: Costs that are dependent on the sales volume (Manufacturing, shipping, Amazon and percentage, Amazon fees). Using our above calculations, we can set this at $12.75.

Break-Even Point = $$60,000 \div $19.99 - $12.75 = 2,988$

The key here is that you must calculate total costs because if you forget something, your calculations won't cover total costs and you could lose money. For this reason, it's always better to calculate higher costs with a safety margin of 10-15% to ensure that you have covered everything.

- How can I package multi-packs and sets for Amazon FBA?

Create an Amazon listing for the multi-pack and or a set, create an ASIN or FNSKU, and package the product as like one item. Any multipacks sent to Amazon must be packaged together in a sealed sleeve, carton, or a box and then labeled was as a multi-pack or sold as a set. Each multipack must be very labeled as a single unit with a very much scannable label.
